

ABSTRACT

A method is described for fabricating a ferroelectric capacitor that overlies a metal-oxide-semiconductor transistor. Low temperature processes are employed to deposit a conducting layer and a ferroelectric layer on an insulating layer that separates the transistor from the ferroelectric capacitor.